The story of that Switzerland which celement is to all nations of Germanic stock or possessed of free institutions both pleasing and ineven in the age of the lake dwellers its people | yours all the while. were of superior intelligence, and Cleser himself restities that the Helvetian Celts were among the bravest men who ever fought that great conquerer. In that great thirteenth century, when a good part of the people in England and other condition of Europe aroused from their long torpor and asserted their political rights -in that morning star century of modeen times -three little lake districts in what is now called Switzerland, then a possession of the house of Hapsburg, confederated, asserted, and finally won perfect autonomy. From these small communities of herdsmen and cultivators-these men of date and mountainaprang the Swiss nation. All along the national march from 1291 to this day Switzerland has illustrated modern annals by the bloody arts of war and signally of late by the white arts of "fair delightful peace." Once the land of free lances and soldiers of fortune for all the world, it is now the land of free schools, free thought, free institutions, and Switzerland it is that leads in the movement for humane warface and the exeminal cosmitton of military strife. Switzerland hang ven to America a Gallatin and an Agussiz, and a number of other excellent citizens, besides an important setthement in one of the original thirteen colonies, No complete enumeration of the benefits that people has conferred upon civilization is possible in the compass of a newspaper article. The very latest political contributions, those of the Initiative and the Referendum, may contain the solution of some questions that are vexing the people of the United States at the present time. By the method of initiating legislation on the demand of so many thousands of voters, It would not be possible to stave off the consideration of measures deemed of vital importance, and both other mode of referring to the people certain acts of the legislature, state or federal, the precise positive will of the people in the presitions submitted could be ascertained. There may not be any well-considered demand for the Initiative and the Referendum In this republic, which is more representative and less democratic perhaps than that of Switzerland, but it would seem that if the Knighte of Labor could get their eight-hour proposition, and the Farmers' Alliance their subtreasury project before the electoral quits that compose the great American sovereign, both sides to the CARBART & LEIDY. confroversy would be better pleased, at least at the moment of submission. Congress did what it could to cripple the U. S. Marine Band, the finest organization of its kind in this country, by neglecting to make appropriations suitable for its proper maintenance, and following this the band went on a short tour through the eastern and central states and made for itself everywhere a record to be proud of, and one, it was thought, would at the next session of Congress be potent in securing the just demands of the band. Now a new phase is put upon the matter and the band is attacked from a new quarter. This time a deputy Fourth Auditor made a ruling that Secretary Whitney's change of rating, done to improve the band by securing the best obtainable talent at such poor prices, was illegal and so he disallowed the accounts of the band with the result that the men will not only not get their accustomed pay, but will be called upon to refund to the government out of the miserable pittance they do get, | 1911 the difference in pay for three years past, a sum amounting to as much as $200 per man in some instances This decision of the deputy af- Now OR Never. fects not only Secretary Whitney's action, but Secretary Tracy's as well, because he accepted the ruling of his predecessor, believing that the rating was just and not illegal, and we have the unusual spectacle of a deputy in one department reversing the decision of two successive cabinet officers and practically destroying the finest musical organization the government possesses.

The percentage of increase of population since the last census in Great Britain was 11.65. In many and loud-voiced welcomes and in state councils held every day between the heads of the two nations, the English government and ruling class are making it appear that the German alliance or "arrangement" is perfectly satisfactory. There can be no doubt of the fact being as it seems, Mr. Labouchere and the radicals to the contrary notwithstanding. The English are the least sentimental people on the planet and while they do not at heart like the German kaiser and do not admire the Hohenzollern pattern of government they have less use for French political bleas and distinctly less use for French territorial aims. Freedom in the latitude of London is always British freedom to do what the British want to do in Great Britain andeverywhere else. It is not concerned about French freedom, German freedom or univer sal freedom.

Secretary Foster owes his first duty to the government. He can far better afford to hazard every interest of his party in a contest with self-seeking, self-styled "labor leaders" than he can afford to degrade his position and all that it represents by one moment's yielding. ---
